

ABSTRACT

A system comprises a main device and an auxiliary device arranged to co-operate with each other. The auxiliary device is arranged to effect a core functionality. The auxiliary device comprises descriptors. The system is characterised in that the auxiliary device comprises at least one descriptor that defines a functionality that is different from the core functionality.

86345_1